

From tennis rackets to nanopants: a world of nanoproduction

Lisa Bufano in her dance Five Open Mouths

Due to a terrible staph infection at 21 that cut off circulation to her legs and fingers, Lisa Bufano is an amputee at the knees and fingers. Yet she is a dancer and leads a relatively normal life, thanks in part to nanotechnology. She runs several miles a day on carbon nanotube legs that are lightweight, incredibly strong and flexible. She uses the legs in one of her dance pieces, entitled "Five Open Mouths".

CNT

wrinkle free

spill-proof

cloth batteries?

New Hope

Old strength

